Natalya P. Maze works as a transactional attorney and a litigator. She finds that her courtroom experience is valuable when advising clients on deals and contract terms. She has experience in a variety of areas, including construction disputes, design professional liability, and real estate transactions, to name a few. She also assists individuals and companies from startup to international, with their business immigration needs. Natalya is fluent in Ukrainian and Russian.

General Civil Litigation

Natalya has experience representing plaintiffs and defendants in a wide range of civil litigation matters from civil fraud to employment litigation. She has argued in state and federal courts and served as a mediator on a King County matter.

Construction

Natalya has represented owners, subcontractors, suppliers and design professionals in all phases of construction projects, including contract drafting and negotiation, and the prosecution and defense of professional negligence claims, lien claims, delay claims, claims for extra work, construction site injury, and defective construction claims.

Real Estate

Natalya represents owners, developers and investors in connection with different types of real estate projects and transactions, including sales of real property, leasing and property management, and litigation over real estate developments and leases.

Business Immigration

Natalya also dedicates a portion of her law practice to business immigration. This work includes assisting companies and individuals with employment-based and investor visas such as TN, H-1B, E-3, E-1/E-2, and O-1 visas.

Prior to her work at Carney Badley Spellman, Natalya was the Regional Immigration Specialist for a large staffing company and assisted hundreds of Boeing and Microsoft contractors with employment-based visa needs.
